WEST KENOSHA COUNTY FAIR OPENS SEPT. 20

Three Days and Evenings to Be Gala Days at Wilmot

EXCELLENT PROGRAM

The third annual West Kenosha County fair will open for three days at the Wilmot Park Thursday, Sept. 20th, and continue through Friday and Saturday.

Aside from the very interesting exhibits of stock, poultry, automobiles, grains and fruits, The Woman's department, School Exhibits and the Pike, many attractive features in the form of entertainment are to be offered this year. The fair will open on Monday at 10:30 a.m. with a big street parade led by the U. F. H. S. band and its director, Clarence Wright. All floats entered by the schools of the County are to parade on Monday and the winners will also be entered in the street parade to be held at 10:30 Friday morning when the business and comic floats that have been entered will form the nucleus of the parades. Saturday's parade will probably be held in the afternoon and will be a parade of all blue ribbon winners in the stock entries.

Splendid speakers have been secured for each day and they will talk in the auditorium of the gymnasium on each afternoon at 2:30. Monday's address is to be made by Wm. Hull, State President for Wisconsin of the Farm Bureau Association. Tuesday's by J. D. Jones, State Commissioner of Agricultural and on Wednesday by Judge Shumard of Manitowoc county will speak.

The Fair Directors have been fortunate in securing the acrobatic acts of the Stirling Trio consisting of two men and a lady. These two acts will be given free twice daily. Then a merry-go-round is to be on the grounds and the kiddies—and many others—are assured of their favorite Fair entertainment. The pike will have the usual stands and attractions. Every evening there will be a dance at the gymnasium, music to be furnished by a popular orchestra and all exhibits will be open.

Stock has been secured from the following well known farms: Rhodesdale, Vaughns, Oxbury, Brookdale, Harvey Nelson, Ludwig Brothers, Holloway Bros., Stoxen Bros. and many others. The poultry entries are said to be almost double last years. This tent is in charge of Wm. Van Liero.

The school exhibits promise a most attractive display, judging from the present entries in needle work, manual training and class work.

County Agent Williams is to have a daily demonstration in the Farm Products tent, showing the benefits to be derived from spraying fruit trees.

A special tent has been assigned to the boys' club to hold their exhibits and it will be entirely in their charge. All the boys' clubs in Kenosha county will have their exhibits in this tent and calves, garden stuff and etc. that have been their special club assignment will be displayed here.

The women's department has had many more entries in all this year owing to the changes in the premiums and articles listed for premiums. The committee in charge have secured able judges for this department: Miss Wald of Burlington will again judge the fancy work and Mrs. E. Foltz of Burlington, fine arts. These exhibits will be placed in the high school rooms as before. In publishing the premium list apple, currant, grape and plum jelly was omitted from the list to be awarded prizes unconditionally. All jelly entries will be gladly received. All entries in this section must be in by noon Thursday as the judging will be done Thursday afternoon.

The women of the community will serve diners in the gymnasium as in previous fairs and those in charge will be: Mrs. A. Schonning, general chairman; Mrs. O. F. Lewis, vice-chairman; Mrs. Roy Button will be in charge Thursday, Mrs. Arthur Bross Friday and Mrs. A. Stoxen Saturday.

Lake County Fair Proves Financial Success This Year

The 70th annual Lake County Fair which closed at Libertyville Monday night, after a three day session, was a success in every sense of the word, according to statements given out by William Woodin and John Wirtz, president and secretary of the fair, respectively. They announced that the fair had "gone over the top" in fine shape, the first time in a number of years. Not only will the association be able to clean up all its indebtedness but a surplus will be left in the treasury.

The plan followed this year of holding the fair but three days instead of a week, as formerly, apparently had much to do with the financial success of the affair, for it served to bring out larger crowds on the days the fair was held and at the same time reduced the overhead expense. The auto races on Sunday is a feature that probably will be followed in succeeding fairs.

Much credit is due the officials of the Fair association for making the fair a success this year. They worked mighty hard and the fine shape everything came through showed the result of their efforts.

The nightly display of fireworks was a much appreciated feature. The display was presented by the Petts company and were among the finest ever seen in the county. The fire-vandeville acts presented in front of the grandstand afternoon and evening also were appreciated greatly.

The attendance at the fair on Labor day was the largest of the three days and was well up to the record attained in other years.

WORKMEN QUIT ON GRAND AVE PAVING

About 45 employees of the Liberty Engineering & Construction company, which is doing the paving work on Grand avenue at Gurnee, went on strike this morning because it was reported one of the foremen was discharged for taking the part of a youth in a controversy.

The dispute is purported to have taken place Friday afternoon when the youth put in his time for a certain number of hours, which Superintendent Mayor, head of the company, claimed was incorrect. It is reported that the foreman claimed that the boy's figures were correct and that following words between the superintendent and the foreman, the latter was discharged.

This action is said to have aroused the employees who failed to report for work Saturday morning.

The construction work is practically completed and therefore there will be little delay in the opening of the road as only the shoulders are now being put in.

MARGARET WATSON OF MILLBURN PASSES AWAY

Mrs. Margaret Watson, for many years a resident of Millburn, died Saturday after a long illness. She was 60 years of age. She had been failing in health for the past several months.

Lake Villa Meets Glenview Sunday

AHLSTROM WANTS SIX ROAD OFFICERS

Sheriff Ahlstrom, in a communication read by the supervisors at the opening of their September session, asked that he be permitted to hire at least six additional motorcycle officers to patrol the Lake county highways, and stated that it would represent an additional expense of about $10,000 in salary.

The communication stated that traffic had increased to such an extent that weekend accidents are very numerous and officers are needed at some of the most important cross roads. Also that these officers could assist in the apprehension of run-away drivers and automobile thieves.

He stated that while three motorcycle officers are being employed by the township it is difficult to get reports of their activities as they do not keep in close touch with the sheriff's office, and that the employment of county highway policemen would prove more satisfactory. The matter was left to the finance and judiciary committees.

These parcels of property on the main street have taken on a much different appearance, and will be far from an eyesore when the doctor gets through with them. Local Farm Boys Secure

Free Trip to State Fair. Two local boys, Albert Herman and Albert Tiffany, have received word that they have been selected by authorities in charge of the Boys' State Fair School, to receive free trips and expenses to Springfield. The school is held on the State Fair grounds during the fair. The two boys will leave Antioch on Friday, September 14th.

Local people feel proud of these two young men and wish them much success at the young people's school at the Illinois State Fair.

Antioch to Have Institute
Word has just been received from Mr. H. E. Young, Superintendent of Farmer's Institutes, Springfield, Ill., that Antioch is to have a Farmer's Institute this winter. The date has been set for Tuesday, January 29th. Credit for securing the Institute goes to the agricultural department of the local high school and the officers of the Lake County Farm Bureau.

It is planned that the entire day be devoted to the discussions of problems in agricultural production. It will be "Alfalfa Day" in Antioch with Professor L. F. Graber of the University of Wisconsin as the main speaker. A program will be of interest to every farmer and his family. A women's program is also planned but the speaker has not yet been secured.

Tramping Silage

Always bear in mind that the more thoroughly the air is excluded, the better will be the silage. If the corn is too ripe, add some water. This can be done by letting a fine stream of water run into the blower fan. Tramp the silage, paying especial attention to the edges. If you have spoiled silage around the edges of a tight silo it is because it was not tramped sufficiently at the edges. Keep one or two men tramping continually at the extreme edges close to the wall and a trifle at other points. It is a little more trouble and expense in the end, trampling will save much silage that would otherwise be spoiled. Tramp the edges, it is important.

Methodist Episcopal Church News

The coming Sunday morning is reception of members and baptism. This is probably the last opportunity to be received into the church or to be baptized this conference year. Only two more Sundays.

Let it be remembered that all leaders of the churches are urging all their people never to be, even for a short period, without active membership in some church where they live. All the churches want their members to join some other church which is doing God's work. If they happen to live where their own church is not organized, so that they will be helping to make God's kingdom to prosper others. Certainly no one would think he is doing all he can to help save others if he has not even a working doing all possible to help in saving membership in any church where he lives.

We are living in days when the hosts of sin are combined as never in history in deadly combat to thwart and defeat the blessed plan and purpose of God to save the people. The battle lines are drawn closer than they ever have been. The holy church of Christ is harder pressed in the battle than ever before. Surely in such days it is doubly a great calamity that any one is for Christ at all should be found not lined up, not enlisted for good fighting in some regiment, in some department of Christ's ready to join church.

Sometimes one wonders whether he is ready to join church. Do you confess your sins to God in prayer? Do you promise Him you will quit them all and do what He wants so far as He will let you know and give you strength? Do you ask Him to forgive you all the past? Do you trust Him to do it? Do you intend to obey and trust him as long as you live, and be the best worker for Him you can? If you will say yes to these questions, and mean it, you are ready to join church.

CHAPTER XVII

Don Carlos.

Stewart took Nels, Monty and Nick Steele aside out of earshot, and they evidently entered upon an earnest colloquy. Presently the other cowboys were called. They all talked more or less, but the deep voice of Stewart predominated over the others. Then the consultation broke up, and the cowboys scattered.

"Rustle, you Indians!" ordered Stewart.

The ensuing scene of action was not reassuring to Madeline and her friends. They were quiet, awaiting some one to tell them what to do. At the offset the cowboys appeared to have forgotten Madeline. Some of them ran off into the woods, others into the open, grassy places, where they rounded up the horses and burros. Several cowboys spread tarponulins upon the ground and began to select and roll small packs, evidently for hurried travel. Nels mounted his horse to ride down the trail. Monty and Nick Steele went off into the grove, leading their horses. Stewart climbed up a steep jumble of stone between two sections of lev, cracked cliff back of the camp.

Madeline's friends all importuned her: "Was there real danger? Were the guerrillas coming? Would a start be made at once for the ranch? Why had the cowboys suddenly become so different?" Madeline answered as best she could; but her replies were only conjecture, and modified to allay the fears of her guests. Helen was in a white glow of excitement.

Soon the cowboys appeared riding barebacked horses, driving in others and the burros. Some of these horses were taken away and evidently hidden in deep recesses between the crags. The string of burros were packed and sent off down the trail in charge of a cowboy. Nick Steele and Monty returned. Then Stewart appeared, clambering down the break between the cliffs.

His next move was to order all the baggage belonging to Madeline and her guests taken up the cliff. This was strenuous toll, requiring the need of lassos to haul up the effects.

"Get ready to climb," said Stewart, turning to Madeline's party.

"Where?" asked Helen.

He waved his hand at the ascent to be made. Exclamations of dismay followed his gesture.

"Mr. Stewart, is there danger?" asked Dorothy, and her voice trembled.

This was the question Madeline had upon her lips to ask Stewart, but she could not speak it.

"No, there's no danger," replied Stewart, "but we're taking precautions we all agreed on as best."

Dorothy whispered that she believed Stewart lied. Castleton asked another question, and then Harvey followed suit. Mrs. Beck made a timid query.

"Please keep quiet and do as you're told," said Stewart, bluntly.

At this juncture, when the last of the baggage was being hauled up the cliff, Monty approached Madeline and removed his sombrero. His black face seemed the same, yet this was a vastly changed Monty.

"Miss Hammond, I'm givin' notice I resign my job," he said.

"Monty! What do you mean? What does Nels mean now, when danger threatens?"

"We jest quit. That's all," replied Monty, tersely. He was stern and somber; he could not stand still; his eyes roved everywhere.

Castleton jumped up from the log where he had been sitting, and his face was very red.

"Mr. Price, does all this blooming fuss mean we are to be robbed or attacked or abducted by a lot of rug-muffin guerrillas?"

"You've called the bet."

Dorothy turned a very pale face toward Monty.

"Mr. Price, you wouldn't—you couldn't desert us now? You and Mr. Nels—"

"Desert you?" asked Monty, blankly.

"Yes, desert us. Leave us when we may need you so much, with something dreadful coming."

Monty uttered a short, hard laugh as he bent an strange look upon the girl.

"Me an' Nels is purty much scared, an' we're goin' to slope. Miss Dorothy, beh' as we've rustled round so much, it sorta hurts us to see nice young girls dragged off by the hair."

Dorothy uttered a little cry and then became hysterical. Castleton for once was fully aroused.

"By Ond! You and your partner are a couple of blooming cowards. Where now is that courage you boasted of?"

Monty's dark face expressed extreme sarcasm.

"Dook, in my time I've seen some bright fellers, but you take the cake. It's most marvelous how bright you are. Figg'er me an' Nels so correct."

Say, Dook, if you don't git rustled off to Mexico an' roped to a cactus bush, you'll hev a swell story for yer English chums. Bah Jewel! You'll tell 'em how you seen two old-time gun-men run like scurried jack-rabbits from a lot of Greasers. Like h--- you will!"

"Monty, shut up!" yelled Stewart as he came hurriedly up. Then Monty slouched away, cursing to himself. Madeline and Helen, assisted by Castleton, worked over Dorothy, and with some difficulty quieted her. Stewart passed several times without noticing them, and Monty, who had been so ridiculously eager to pay every little attention to Dorothy, did not see her at all. Rude it seemed; in Monty's case more than that. Madeline hardly knew what to make of it.

Stewart directed cowboys to go to the head of the open place in the cliff and let down lassos. Then, with little waste of words, he urged the women toward this rough ladder of stones.

"By Gosh You and Your Partner Are a Couple of Blooming Cowards."

"We want to hide you," he said, when they demurred. "If the guerrillas come, we'll tell them you're all gone down to the ranch. If we have to fight you'll be safe up there."

Helen stepped boldly forward and let Stewart put the loop of a lasso round her and tighten it. He waved his hand to the cowboys above.

"Just walk up, now," he directed.

Helen did.

It proved to the watchers to be an easy, safe and rapid means of scaling the steep passage. The men climbed up without assistance. Edith Wayne and Madeline climbed last, and, once up, Madeline saw a narrow bench, thick with shrubs and overshadowed by huge, leaning crags. There were holes in the rock, and dark fissures leading back. It was a rough, wild place. Tarponulins and bedding were then hauled up, and feed and water. The cowboys spread comfortable beds in several of the caves, and told Madeline and her friends to be as quiet as possible, not to make a light, and to sleep dressed, ready for travel at a moment's notice.

Madeline deplored the discomfort and distress, but felt no real alarm. She was more inclined to evasive kindness here than to sincerity, for she had decided unselfishness. The swift change in the manner and looks of her cowboys had been a shock to her. The last glance she had of Stewart's face, then stern, almost sad, and haggard with worry, remained to nudge her foreboding.

Darkness appeared to drop swiftly down; the coyotes began their haunting, mournful howls; the stars shewed and grew brighter; the wind moaned through the tips of the pines. The cowboys below had built a fire, and the light from it rose in a huge, fan-shaped glow. Madeline peered down from the cliff. The distance was short, and occasionally she could distinguish a word spoken by the cowboys. They were unconcernedly cooking and eating.

Presently Nick Steele silenced the campfire circle by raising a warning hand. The cowboys bent their heads, listening. Madeline listened with all her might. She heard one of the hounds whine, then the faint beat of horse's hoofs. The beat of hoofs grew louder, entered the grove, then the circle of light. The rider was Nels. He dismounted, and the sound of his low voice just reached Madeline.

"One, it's Nels. Something doin'?"

Madeline heard one of the cowboys call, softly.

"Sehol him over," replied Stewart.

Nels stalked away from the fire.

"See here, Nels, the boys are all right, but I don't want them to know everything about this mix-up," said

Stewart, as Nels came up. "Did you find the girl?"

Madeline guessed that Stewart referred to the Mexican girl Bonita. "No. But I met—" Madeline did not catch the name—"nor he was wild. He was with a forest-ranger. An' they said Pat Hawe had trailed her an' was takin' her down under arrest."

"ADAM'S RIB" AT THE MAJESTIC SAT.-SUN.

A story with real human interest is "Adam's Rib," Cecil B. De Mille's latest Paramount which is coming to the Majestic theatre next Saturday and Sunday. The theme of the production is the unengagement of the affairs of a husband and wife by their young daughter, a typical example of the sensible type of the modern girl.

Anna Q. Nilsson, as Mrs. Ramsay, the wife of Michael Ramsay, prosperous Chicago business man played by Milton Sills, has taken a fancy to M. Jaromir (Theodore Kosloff), the exiled king of Morania. Her husband, fearing that he is going to loose her, hatches a plan to have Jaromir's country recall him to the throne.

Morania is in need of funds, and Ramsay, an enormously rich man, buys up all the wheat in Morania and in return they recall Jaromir to his throne, and he is thus gotten out of the way. His wife returns to him, after realizing that her interest in Jaromir was only a passing fancy.

The daughter, played by Pauline Garon, saves the mother from discovery while he is at the apartment of the king. Ramsay sees his wife's pocket-book on the table. Mathilda peers out from behind the curtain where she and her mother are concealed and says that she is the one that came to visit Jaromir.

Ramsay is completely taken back, and tells her that she is an outcast and no man would marry her. Prof. Nathan Reade (Elliot Dexter) whom Mathilda had met at the customs inspection on her return from Europe, stops up and professes his love. Mathilda and he are married, and everything turns out well in the end, thanks to the girl. Jaromir is punished by marrying a fat princess awaiting him in his native land.

Mr. De Mille in this production, has inserted a sort of "vision" scene similar to the noted "bacchannal" scene in "Manslaughter," shewing the life of primitive man as compared to that of the present day beings. You will be surprised to note that while cultures have passed since the era of the cave man, the love affairs of the entire human race are but much the same as they were in the time of the "tegosaurus, unginals," or in plain English, the armored dinosa-
